

Who Are We?

Personocratia's Path

What the Hell Am I Doing Here Anyway?

As Personocratia's Path is going to be a regular column, let us first start by introducing Personocratia and telling her story. She was born out of the question stated above – What the hell am I doing here anyway? At the end of her first book, The Medical Mafia Ghis (previously called Ghislaine Lanctôt, MD) mentioned that the true state of a person's health depends upon her level of consciousness. As we are divine beings, submission is what makes us sick. But how should a divine being act in daily life? To answer this question, she experimented intuitively for the next seven years, developing practical solutions. In her second book, What the Hell Am I Doing Here Anyway?, she came up with a key concept, which she called Personocratia.

The name Personocratia comes from two words. In non-legal English, a person is an individual human being. In Greek, kratos means rule or authority. Thus, a Personocratia is an individual who follows her own internal divine rule. The word finishes with an A in order to celebrate the feminine principle (spirit/soul), which always precedes the masculine principle (matter/body). Personocratia can be identified through three criteria: 1) Identity; 2) Authority; 3) Sincerity. Firstly, she knows that she is an individualized version of the Supreme Being. Secondly, she acknowledges her individual sovereignty. Thirdly, she behaves as this Supreme Authority in all aspects of her daily life.

A Personocratia represents an individual with a totally different consciousness. Why is this new type of awareness needed today? Simply because all aspects of human society are on the verge of total collapse! Bankers control the world through a system of money that is based on credit rather than a real exchange of products or services. This situation cannot go on forever and a global financial crash is imminent. Most political, legal, financial, religious, spiritual leaders and other elites are corrupted beyond repair. It is now too late to improve on a global system that is rotten to the core. Simply, we are fast approaching the end of humanity as we know it.

This is not a pessimistic view, but a realistic one. I need to face the truth before I decide to explore a radically new path. Once I see the situation with my eyes wide open, I cannot go back to believing in old stories. Remember when you were a kid and someone told you that Santa Claus was not real? Once you found out, you could never believe that story again. Well, the same thing is happening to us now, as we discover the real state of today's various systems.

Once I understand who creates laws and why, I cannot obey them without cringing. Once I discover that schools and universities teach us lies so that we become the elite's submissive slaves, I cannot spend years learning what I will later need to unlearn in order to become who I really am. Once I find out how money is created out of thin air, I cannot continue using credit cards and bank accounts. Once I know that bankers finance both sides of a war to gain control of a country, I can neither pay taxes that go straight into their pockets nor participate in wars as a soldier.

Once I understand that the biggest lure to remain in the system is my belief in the sacredness of the family, a notion engrained for generations by the elite into its sheeple, I cannot go on with my role as a devoted mother/father, dutiful daughter/son, faithful husband/wife. The list goes on until, one day, I realize that nothing I believed in was ever true. They were mere dreams instilled in me by the elite in order to enslave me while they kept pretending that I was free. A slave who thinks she is free does not rebel.

O, what a good sheep I have been! Now that I KNOW, how can I go on?

When I am driving on a road and realize that it is leading to a dead-end, what do I do? I stop and make a 180° turn in the other direction.

Guess what? Humanity is in a dead-end! So, STOP! Let us stop doing what we have been doing for millennia and explore a totally new way of being and acting. I had been listening to external authorities. I will now listen to my own internal authority. I had been dutifully obeying parents, teachers, bosses, the media... I will now do what my own inner voice tells me. It may imply acting in a way that is so radically different that friends and family will think that I have gone crazy. Let them think what they want. Let the unconscious white sheep obey until they collapse. Let the rebellious black sheep go on with their endless fighting until they die of fear and exhaustion. I am getting out of the sheep mode to live like a Personocratia, who knows that she is the Supreme Being inside a physical, emotional and mental body. Finally, there is hope ahead – a new and exciting path to follow.

Personocratia's Path is meant to help you explore this innovative behaviour. It will offer disturbing information ⇒ about the real workings behind each system. Because of space restraints and as the mind never has enough proof when it is afraid of losing an old belief, no lengthy explanations will be given to convince you that what is mentioned is indeed true. To have convincing proof, you will have to surf the Internet, browse through books, attend lectures, or trust your inner voice, all of which we have done extensively before bringing you the information that will be found inside each of our columns.

Two Personocratias – or more, depending on the subject – will be writing this regular column. The first, Ghis, previously known as Ghislaine Lanctôt, was an MD for 25 years and the owner of several medical clinics in Quebec, Ontario and Florida. After writing her bestseller, The Medical Mafia, she stopped her medical career and dived into the study of all the others systems that touched her daily life. She told herself: “If indeed the Supreme Being resides in all things, this means that a plant, a dog, and a human being are all made up of this Supreme Authority. It is the very fabric of all living and non-living matter. The only difference is that I know it and the dog doesn't. Once I truly believe this, I cannot go on acting like an intelligent and fearful animal. I must change my behaviour and start acting like the Supreme Being that I truly am.

But how the hell does one do that?” So, Ghis studied all the details of her life and, each time, she would ask herself: “How would the Supreme Being act? Would It wear a seatbelt? Pay income tax? Use a credit car? Call Its reproducers ‘Mom’ and ‘Dad’? Lie to Its boss in order to get a raise? Have sex with Its partner when It doesn't feel like it? Have sex at all, as reproduction is not needed when one is immortal? Continue a job that bores It? Now, would the Supreme Being buy life or fire insurance? Would It carry a health insurance card? Eat low calorie food in order to stay slim? Put on makeup and sexy clothing? Get a facelift or breast implants? Take Viagra and run five kilometres a day to stay fit? The answer is NO, in each case!

Every new question brought a change of behaviour. Ghis' daily life was totally transformed. She dropped credit cards and, gradually, all other cards. She closed her bank accounts and stopped paying income tax. She told her four ‘reproductions’ that she was not a mother and that she no longer considered them as her children, but as old friends. Her latest and most dramatic change was to let go of citizenship, her birth certificate, her name and her passport. No longer a Canadian citizen, she is left with her true identity – Ghis, a Personocratia who knows that she is the Supreme Being incarnated in a body. This whole process, she shared in her second book, What the Hell Am I Doing Here Anyway? (2002) and her third book, Madame Ghis – Escape in Prison. The whole process is now explained in more details in a series called Personocratia's Booklets, which she co-authors with Mado.

The second regular writer of this column, Mado, followed many side tracks before discovering Personocratia in 2004: martial arts, high school teaching, outdoor education, permaculture, alternative health, writing and homeschooling three kids. Her life eventually became a living hell as she tried her best to live an out-of-the-system lifestyle with her family while mothering her severely retarded and sickly third child. As for many other Personocratias, suffering became the springboard into a new life where she now learns to let go of the ego's outdated animal program in order to live according to the inner call of her soul.

We guarantee that this new Personocratia's Path column will rock your boat, forcing you to reassess your old belief system, to question fundamental assumptions that you and all of society have been taking for granted for millennia.

Here are a few: “The family is sacred”, “The Bible is sovereign” • “The Constitution is paramount” • “A regular medical check-up is the surest way to stay healthy” • “We start and end with the family” • “Two things are inevitable, death and income tax” • “One cannot survive without food and drink” • “Working hard guarantees salvation” • “If I don't pay income tax, there will be no roads, schools or hospitals” • “The first wealth is health”

• “Once a mother, always a mother” • “We are all children of God” • “Death is a natural part of life” • and so on. Personocratia will explain why none of this is true, not even death! Once this is established, she will propose novel ways of behaving in daily life that will bring about the changes leading to a new species, where accident, illness, aging, and death no longer exist.

You may tell yourself: “What is the use in changing my whole life? Things ain't that bad!” Realize that we are in the middle of a huge evolutionary crisis. Humanity is fast disappearing to give rise to a new species. The basic structure of modern society is in an advanced state of putrefaction. Let us put our energies in the right direction. Instead of trying to improve on the old system, let us get ready for this new life in a transformed world.

How can we do this, concretely? Stay tuned with the Personocratia's Path column, which you will now be able to find inside each new Dialogue magazine.
